MIA BERRADA

---

Mia Berrada is a Moroccan actress based in New York. She recently finished her year at the Lee Strasberg Theatre & Film Institute, which taught her a lot and confirmed that acting is exactly where she wants to be. Recently, she had the chance to work on The Terminal List Season 2 and the French feature film L'Homme des Signes, both incredible experiences. Before acting took over her life, she studied Interior Architecture — and still can't walk into an apartment, restaurant, or random coffee shop without mentally redesigning it. It's a problem.

ON BIRTHDAYS

Birthdays and I have always had a slightly complicated relationship. I love celebrating the people I care about, but I'm much less enthusiastic when it's my own birthday — I always want those 24 hours to pass in about 24 minutes. Which is funny, because I don't usually mind being the center of attention. What fascinates me is how differently everyone experiences birthdays: magical, emotional, stressful, exciting, nostalgic, or all of the above at once. That's one of the reasons I felt so connected to this play. And who knows... maybe by the end of it, it'll finally answer all my questions about birthdays.

YANZI DING

Originally from Taiwan, Yanzi is a harpist, pianist-singer, and actress.

Fun facts — Immigration specialist at a law firm, helping fellow artists navigate their O-1 and Green Card petitions with efficiency; vegan foodie & lifelong Doraemon fan.

Comfort food — Mango sticky rice (must be served warm, with thick coconut curd from a Thai restaurant).

A BIRTHDAY MEMORY

There was a birthday when I felt completely clueless about life, so I decided to travel alone to Rishikesh to see the Ganges River. Despite my family's worries about the dangers of a girl traveling alone in India, I went anyway for my spiritual search. Although I didn't find enlightenment there, on my birthday in New Delhi I surprisingly bumped into two male college classmates whom I hadn't seen in years. We ended up traveling together as a Taiwanese troupe — two guys protecting a wandering girl. I believe God had a plan for the piggy.

ANA ELLIOTT

COLUM GOEBELBECKER

---

Colum Goebelbecker is an intercultural storyteller, actor, singer, dancer, percussionist, educator, and devised theatre maker. After relocating to New York from Chicago, he made his Off-Broadway debut as the Bandleader in Falling Out. He has worked, lived, and/or trained in Ireland, the U.K., Singapore, Malaysia, South Africa, Argentina, and Cambodia. Favorite credits include Grease, Go, Dog. Go!, ¡Ve Perro, Ve!, touring internationally with the CoComelon World Tour, and performing with The Second City.

A BIRTHDAY MEMORY

Theatre and birthdays have always gone hand in hand for me. Since my early days in Chicago community theater as a child, I've often celebrated July 26 at a cast party. One favorite memory is my Golden Birthday last year, when a large group of my family drove down from Chicago to Springfield, IL to celebrate with my Grease cast and I.

MER MUIRHEAD

Mer Muirhead is a New York City/Long Island based performer, pianist, director, writer, and voice teacher with a love for uplifting fresh and new voices, holding a BFA in Drama from Hofstra University. Favorite stage credits include Countess Lily in Anastasia, Moonshine in Pyramus and Thisbe: A Comic Opera, Woyzeck in Woyzeck, and the Balladeer in 35mm: A Musical Exhibition; favorite directing/music projects have appeared at The Tank, The Green Room 42, and the Hudson Guild Theatre. Mer's students have been seen onstage across Long Island, New York City, and New Jersey! Offstage, Mer can be found attending an obscene number of concerts, consuming ungodly amounts of caffeine, or creating an odd new vegan recipe that somehow always turns out as tasty as it is messy-looking. Follow Mer's adventures at @mer.juliamuir.

A BIRTHDAY MEMORY

My favorite birthday memory was this past year, when my friends, students, coworkers, and family all came together for me after I'd had a difficult year and filled the whole week with so many beautiful moments that I truly didn't expect. It just kept going on and on — a friend taking me for a new piercing, a homemade vegan cheesecake from a family friend, a surprise celebration at work including a serenade from my students, a baked good exchange with a friend whose birthday was the next day, a special phone call from my godson. I was so overwhelmed by the outpouring of love at that time, and I've never stopped being grateful for the people I love who make every day feel like a birthday.

YI TONG

Yi Tong is a New York-based actor, director, and musical theatre artist from China. He holds a Master of Music in Vocal Performance: Musical Theatre from NYU Steinhardt and a BFA in Musical Theatre from Xinghai Conservatory of Music. As a performer, his favorite credits include Mamma Mia! (Sam), Fame (Joe Vegas), and appearances in numerous musical theatre productions and concerts. As a director, he has led productions including James and the Giant Peach and 1034 Magic, bringing together young performers through collaborative, story-driven theatre. Yi is passionate about creating work that connects cultures and celebrates the power of live performance.

A BIRTHDAY MEMORY

One birthday a few years ago, I spent the entire day teaching voice lessons, writing a script, and directing rehearsals until 9 p.m. After rehearsal, my students surprised me with a sugar-free chestnut cake because they knew I was avoiding sugar during that period. When I got home, my parents had another surprise waiting — a birthday cake for me and a dog-friendly cake so our two dogs could celebrate with us. That day reminded me that the greatest birthday gift isn't cake — it's feeling loved by the people (and pets!) who make life so meaningful.
